WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

*** High Risk in the NW Mtns / Northeast CA / Northern Sierra / Northern End of Far Eastside Again Today for Lightning *****

Moist, unstable monsoon air lingering over the region will lead to more afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms today. Some of the storms could have locally heavy precipitation as has been the case lately. The main focus areas for thunderstorm potential will continue to be the Far Eastside, Northern Sierra, Northeast CA, and NW Mtns. Isolated thunderstorms are also possible over the Mendocino National Forest mountains today. Thunderstorms SE of Susanville are likely to produce heavy rainfall, so large fire potential there is low. The other areas mentioned will have higher potential for new large fires as less rainfall is expected. Outflow winds from any of these thunderstorms could gust to around 40 mph.

Strong high pressure will persist over California well into next week. The region will be quite hot and dry, although a few afternoon or evening thunderstorms may develop over the northern and eastern mountain areas again for a few more days. Temperatures will become as much as around 10 degrees above normal after today with only a few degrees of cooling expected for the weekend. Coastal areas will be under the influence of a rather shallow marine layer with a fairly light onshore flow. Overall, winds will be quite light across the region as well.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

***Daily night through early morning north winds over Santa Barbara County and the Grapevine tonight through Wednesday morning*****

***Near record high temperatures through Friday along with very low humidity*****

***Scattered wet thunderstorms today over the Sierra high country, Inyo National Forest and deserts north of I-15*****

A strengthening mass of high pressure over the area will generate near record high temperatures along with low relative humidity through the end of the workweek. Temperatures today will climb another 3-5 degrees with highs in the 80s in the mountains to 103-106 in the valleys to 122 in the low desert. The hottest day will likely be Wednesday before a weak onshore push brings a slow cooling trend through the first half of next week. While the coast will cool off a bit by Friday, the valleys will remain over 100 until Saturday when temperatures will finally trend back toward normal. There will also be night through morning north winds of 15-30 mph in Santa Barbara County and the I-5 Corridor through Thursday morning. Minimum Relative Humidity will drop into the 10-15% range over most areas below 7,000 feet Wednesday and Thursday afternoon. There will be scattered wet thunderstorms today along the Sierra Crest eastward into the Inyo National Forest and the high desert. After today, only some flat cumulus development is expected. Temperatures will remain seasonally warm through the first half of next week before warmer weather returns next Wednesday or Thursday.
